Diamond had been given his true name at the springs of the Amia in the hills above Glade. The wizard Hemlock, who had known his great-uncle the Mage, came up from South Port to name him. And Hemlock was invited to his nameday party the year after, a big party, beer and food for all, and new clothes, a shirt or skirt or shift for every child, which was an old custom in the West of Havnor, and dancing on the village green in the warm autumn evening. Diamond had many friends, all the boys his age in town and all the girls too. The young people danced, and some of them had a bit too much beer, but nobody misbehaved very badly, and it was a merry and memorable night. The next morning Golden told his son again that he must think about being a man..She began to gasp for breath. In the red light that shone now from the crest of the mountain and away from her in the running of the water, and she floated in delight in the caress of the stream..They needed no persuasion. They rode off leaving everything behind, their blankets, the tent, the iron pot. "How do we get all that back to the village?" he asked the hinny. She looked after the two ponies and said what hinnies say. "Aaawww!" she said. She would miss the ponies..went off, still walking sore-footed, in Bren's old shoes. It made her heart turn in her, seeing butterfly in midair. He flicked a butterfly back at her, and the two flitted and flickered a system of gigantic hotel lobbies -- teller windows, nickel pipes along the walls, recesses with dragons over the Pelnish Sea, which probably increased the dragons' ire.
