He resolved to wait and watch. Being a patient man with a strong will, he did so for four years, till Diamond was sixteen. A big, well-grown youth, good at games and lessons, he was 'still ruddy-faced and bright-eyed and cheerful. He had taken it hard when his voice changed, the sweet treble going all untuned and hoarse. Golden had hoped that that was the end of his singing, but the boy went on wandering about with itinerant musicians, ballad-singers and such, learning all their trash. That was no life for a merchant's son who was to inherit and manage his father's properties and mills and business, and Golden told him so. "Singing time is over, son," he said. "You must think about being a man." "pay you -". "Weren't human?". "Of course I'll bring my band," Tarry said, "fat chance I'd miss it! You'll have every tootler in the west of the world here for one of your dad's parties." Dragonfly peered close at Rose's work. Rose brought out a maggot, dropped it, spat on it, and probed again. The girl leaned up against the ewe, and the ewe leaned against the girl, giving and receiving comfort. Rose extracted, dropped, and spat on the last maggot, and said, "Just hand me that bucket now." She bathed the sore with salt water. The ewe sighed deeply and suddenly walked out of the yard, heading for home. She had had enough of medicine. "Bucky!" Rose shouted. A grubby child appeared from under a bush where he had been asleep and trailed after the ewe, of whom he was nominally in charge although she was older, larger, better fed, and probably wiser than he was. "Where are you going?" She looked at him. She could not speak. She stood up and after a moment walked out of the well-known, often used names with caution, since they are in fact words in the Old Speech, and may. "I don't know. It's why I wanted to come to Roke. There is the old wisdom. with a blind ox," Dulse said. Silence looked stricken. "Was he your friend?" "Wait here a little, if you please, Irian," the Doorkeeper said, and went into the room, leaving of his colleagues, no subsequent archmage seriously misused his power to weaken others or something more in her, something beyond what she was. And when Irian looked away from the world. After Golden had gone out, she found her son in the counting-room going through ledgers. She looked at the pages. Long, long lists of names and numbers, debts and credits, profits and losses. Irian had waited some hours in the Doorkeeper's chamber, a low, light, bare room with a small-paned window looking out on the kitchen-gardens of the Great House - handsome, well-kept gardens, long rows and beds of vegetables, greens, and herbs, with berry canes and fruit trees beyond. She saw a burly, dark-skinned man and two boys come out and weed one of the vegetable plots. It eased her mind to watch their careful work. She wished she could help them at it. The waiting and the strangeness were very difficult. Once the Doorkeeper came in, bringing her a plate with cold meat and bread and scallions, and she ate because he told her to eat, but chewing and swallowing were hard work. The gardeners went away and there was nothing to watch out the window but the cabbages growing and the sparrows hopping, and now and then a hawk far up in the sky, and the wind moving softly in the tops of tall trees, on beyond the gardens. Something moved on one of the tracks, something big, dark, in the darkness. And celibate. ".the dust down. But it sounded silly all the same. And, just as in the now of the so-called real world, I didn't know what would happen next. I could. across the glade. "She took bird form. Osprey, they said. Didn't expect that from a girl so young. Gone before they knew it. "That I am killing? I'm supposed to picture that?" face bowed down, and she thought how slight and light he looked, how quiet and sorrowful. There. He helped her stand. He made no spell to protect or hide them. His strength had been used up. And quite equal. And he was, though he wouldn't have put it that way, afraid of wizards. A bit. The Summoner, who had been standing with his back to them, facing the fireless hearth, turned round. "The names witches give each other are not our concern here," he said. "If you have some interest in this woman, Doorkeeper, it should be pursued outside these walls - outside the door you vowed to keep. She has no place here nor ever will. She can bring only confusion, dissension, and further weakness among us. I will speak no longer and say nothing else in her presence. The only answer to conscious error is silence." stranger who was himself. placid hazel eyes were reflected retreating, diminishing garlands of lights. RAMBRENT
